1. Recently various individuals in Bulgaria were called up to the Army. They were forced to leave their places of work and join their units without the knowledge of their families and fellow workers. Only the responsible Communist official was informed of their departure.
2. The majority of those called were from the Plovdiv (units of Second Army) area. Reportedly, the main reasons for the calls were to train personnel to be used to reinforce the various units of the Second Army which had been transferred to the Yugoslav border.
